Well Known McGill Athlete Dies of Wounds

Word was received last night that Lieut. Lorne C. Montgomery, Med. '17, serving at the front with a Montreal Highland Unit of the Third Canadian Division, has died of wounds. Lieut. Montgomery had only recently returned to the front after a furlough in England, where he met several McGill men.

Lieut. Montgomery, who was a member of the senior intercollegiate football team, and a student in the Faculty of Medicine, enlisted originally as a private in No. 3 Canadian General Hospital (McGill). Going to France with that unit, he rose to the rank of sergeant, and then determined to secure a transfer to the infantry, where he could see more active service.

He returned to England, and there qualified for a commission in the Canadian infantry, being attached to the Highland Battalion under the command of Lieut.-Col. J. A. Cantlie.

Lieut. Montgomery was known at the University not only as an excellent all-round athlete, but as a brilliant student. It was characteristic of him that he carried off the honours and prizes in spite of the fact that he was a member of the senior football, hockey and basketball teams, and also competed in the indoor gymnasium competitions.

MEDICAL OFFICER NOW ON LEAVE SPOKE AT R.V.C.

Major MacPhail Addressed Alumnae Society Last Night.

HOPES TO BE IN AT FINISH.

Has Seen Much Service at Front
—Praises Spirit of French Women.

A deeply serious and impressive address was delivered yesterday evening at the R. V. C. by Major MacPhail, of the McGill Faculty of Medicine, who has lately returned from the front.

Sir William Peterson introduced the speaker as a member of the Sixth Ambulance Corps, of which Canada is very proud, and of whose work at Vimy Ridge she is deeply appreciative. The Principal went on to say that Major MacPhail was back for a time on active service, and will soon return to the front. He is one of those who hope to be "in at the finish."

Major MacPhail introduced his lecture by saying that it was three years since he left the University, and that during that time he had seen many sights and had had many sorrows. But the most memorable sight of all he had witnessed was that of the Canadian Army which had been created out of chaos. The Canadian Army is the equal of any army in its dignity, sense of duty and discipline. By this time the enemy knows well the mettle of its adversaries. The remarkable thing is that we should have developed such a discipline. The Canadian regiments are well known by the way in which they march, and the regard in which they are held is well shown by the saying of "Mr. Haig: 'I know who has put me here (referring to his position), it is the Canadian Army.' In addition to being an army of force, it is an army of goodness. I have seen its men growing better, but no man in it ever grew worse. Although I have lived at the front three years, those years have been the happiest of my life. That life is quite a normal one, we visit friends, our brothers, sons, fathers and talk of familiar things, the old home life, the University and other things. It is hard for you here to understand our intimacy. At Vimy we had to defend a front of 2½ miles and one mile deep. It was a good life and pleasant, one of contentment and peace. One is entirely free from material concerns when each day is lived as though it were the last. It is hard to explain to you how simple a life it is, its three elements being equality, obedience, and temperance. At the front you have the impression of a world that carries on its work without your assistance. At first sight it is not obvious what women have to do with the war. Until this present war, every war was fought in the interest of the women and of the home. The Germans have taught us that war is a business, and I am inclined to think that they do not consider it a paying business.

In Canada we do not experience the full benefit of the war as have France and Belgium, of course. We were the last to make a stand against the Hun. And so, the association of women with the war is not so obvious to us here in Canada. What we have done, we have done without having seen the foe face to face. Our situation is thus worse than that of France and of Belgium, for we have to depend on our imaginations for our inspiration and support. Here you are perplexed, because you are carrying on at once the life of peace and the life of war—a great waste to you. Men and women have to be exempted from Military Service because they have to keep up the Old Show. For instance, on board the ship on which I returned, and also on the trains, we were waited upon by hearty, able, young men.

ARRANGEMENTS NOW COMPLETE MED. DANCE

Reception Commences at 8.45 p.m. on Ground Floor of Medical Museum.

All arrangements have now been completed for the Medical Dance, which is to take place to-night, in the Assembly Hall of the New Medical Building. Lieut. Ionanid, representing Queen Marie, who is in charge of the Roumanian Red Cross, will be the guest of the evening. The patrons are Sir William Peterson and Acting Dean Blackader. Mrs. Birkett, Mrs. D. Evans, Miss E. Harbatt and Dr. Maude E. Abbott will act as chaperones.

The reception will commence at 8.45 p.m., on the ground floor of the Medical Museum. Dancing will commence at 9 o'clock sharp. In order to facilitate the arrangements made, everyone is urged to be at the reception. A military touch will be added to the Dance, in that the different dance numbers will be announced by the piercing notes of a bugle from the C. O. T. C. Band, who will be in uniform.

The programme of sixteen numbers, with two supper extras, will be finished by 1.30 a.m. There are still a few tickets remaining to be sold, and all those desirous of attending the Dance should see Mr. Culyer, at the McGill Union, as soon as possible. Mr. Eckstein and his seven piece orchestra, consisting mostly of returned men, have pledged themselves to make the musical part of the Dance an enormous success.

The programme is as follows:

C. E. Watson, Sci. '19, Tells Experiences in England.

MEETS MANY MCGILL MEN.

Contrasts Work in Canadian, With That in Imperial Camps.

The following letters have been received from Conrad E. Watson, Sci. '19. While at McGill "Con" made a record for himself in the academic line, leading his class in the freshman year, and almost doing so again last April. Immediately upon conclusion of the exams, Watson enlisted in the Draft of Siege Artillery, being recruited by Sir Stopford Brunt, and is still carrying on with them.

"Dear —, Just a line to let you know that I'm still alive and kicking. Well, after a calm but long voyage we reached Liverpool on July 4. The boat was not slow, because she could make greater speed when necessary. She was a triple screw 32,000 ton boat, new, and fitted especially for that service. Our bunks had "state-rooms", four bunks in each with straw beds and pillows, but the other units had hammocks. Our men acted as signallers on the bridge, military police and guards on the water-tight doors.

We docked at 6 p.m., and boarded a train at 6.30 p.m., travelling that night through Crewe, Birmingham, London, etc., until about 4 a.m., when we de-trained and marched two miles to a Segregation Camp at Otterpool. We were ordered 8 to a tent, but luckily we got away with 6 in ours, Anderson, P. A. G. Clark, Ross Wiggs, McGregor (both Sci. '20, I think), and Blackshaw, who graduated with Sci. '17. On the boat Anderson, Latham (Arts '19, I think), and Macnaughton, Sci. '20, and I were in one cabin. We stayed at Otterpool till the 11th. We left at 5.30 a.m., roll-call at six and a "little" exercise, a double for a mile or so, then breakfast at 7 a.m. After this we had a long route march, one hour physical training from 8 to 12, and 1.30 to 5 p.m., and lights out at 10.15. This was our first taste of real Army life, where we got in line with our mess tins for grub, slept rolled in blankets on the floor, etc. In the afternoon there were games and prizes for the winning teams of the different batteries. There were two other batteries, which came over with us, and we looked them in every thing except hard baseball, which we only lost 14—13. Tag or war, relay race, obstacle race, indoor baseball, soccer, all went to us in spite of the fact that we were christened the "Kil-Globe Battery" by the green-eyed monsters.

On the 17th we had a 7-mile march to Shorncliffe, and were quartered in barracks, except the signallers, and a few others, for whom there was no room in the huts. Unfortunately we were all broken to pieces, and most of the fellows I knew best were drafted to the signallers on account of weight, and the rest of us had to do dismounted drill, i.e., rifle Artillery, training, and Infantry training.

I went to London on six days' leave. We reached there about 10.30 a.m. We went to Madame Tussaud's Wax Works, and after supper to the Hippodrome. While there I visited Green Park, and coming back we passed Buckingham Palace and grounds. One evening six of us went to Hyde Park, and listened to the band. While at Otterpool I met "Dad" Lamb. He was training just a few miles away. I also saw H. Nichols at Shorncliffe, but was not speaking to him. He is a lieutenant in the artillery now. There are lots of other McGill men around, but they were before my time.

18th Canadian Siege, North Minden Barracks, Deep Cut Camp.

Oct. 2. Dear —, Well, now for a little history (dry facts). We are a battery now. I could not have told you before as I did not know myself when I last wrote you. We carried on with the usual routine at Shorncliffe, after our return from London until Aug. 14, when we were informed we were to be a battery, and were inspected by

THE LIBRARY—GENTLEMEN.

It is annoying, to say the least, to have to continually complain of the failure of certain members of our Undergraduate body to respect the elementary requirements of a gentleman. It always has been, and should be, the aim of the University man to establish a standard not only in matters purely intellectual, but also in culture.

A man who sets out upon his career without recognizing the importance of cultivating the habits of a gentleman, is bound, sooner or later, to be impressed with the immensity of his disadvantage, even though his occupation involves nothing more public than the superintending of an insignificant farm in the solitary regions of the Peace River.

There are certain unwritten rules which must be recognized by us all if we hope to gain the respect of our fellows. Quite apart from what may be regarded by some as superfluous is the requirement that the rights of those with whom we associate be recognized. To a certain extent the law enforces compliance with this rule. However, there are unwritten rules, which, though not legally enforceable, cannot fail to secure observance of those who receive—and are worthy to receive—the designation of "gentlemen."

Perhaps the reader is at a loss to account for this resort to moralization on our part, but we cannot resist pointing out the real necessity for a strict adherence to the elementary rules, the observance of which is essential to gentlemanly conduct. A visit to the University Library almost any afternoon will assist very significantly in rendering clear the point we are desirous of emphasizing. Briefly stated, as a matter of fact, the Library has apparently lost its old-time meaning to the student—so-called. A visit to the Library—in the case at least of a person bent on indulging in reading—has of late been characterized by one inevitable termination—a premature exit. The place ostensibly set apart as a quiet retreat to which the industrious student may resort for the purpose of study has degenerated into a mere rendezvous to which certain members of the student body repair for no other purpose apparently than to spend a few spare moments in free and easy (as well as loud) conversation with their friends. Regardless of the inconvenience thereby occasioned others, they succeed in drawing upon themselves the well-merited disgust and anger of those—generally their seniors—whom they disturb.

Surely men who have, at least, spent a few months at the University have sufficiently outgrown the more or less childish habits of the "prep." school to be able to realize that they are, at college, put to a certain extent upon their honour, and that though the restrictions are for the most part of an intangible nature, nevertheless they exist. The respect of a man alone should be sufficient to prevent him from thus acquiring for himself so undesirable a reputation as that which will surely characterize those of the above-mentioned tendencies. We certainly hope that there will not be further cause for complaint in the matter of the observance of the library rules.

FROM DARKEST RUSSIA.

"Dear Beans:
"Some time ago I spoke to you of a Russian humorist, who, before he returned to his native land to convulse the Bolsheviks with mirth, used to cut my uncle's corns on Third Avenue and 148th St. I have opened an epistolary catenation with this Slavic sage. He has completely opened his warm, tender heart to me, and has sent me one of his privately printed diaries (limited to one million copies). I solemnly swore never to betray his secrets. Wherefore I append a passage from the Diary.

I trust that he will not soon forget the lesson I taught him. As he cringingly approached me, I grasped him by the throat, and choked him. Choked him! The expression on his face was a masterpiece in mimicry. Very amusing! His eyes bulged from their sockets. I squeezed them out. He looked very funny without eyes.
"I went to the window. The sun was rising. It was the same sun that rose yesterday. Oh, the dread monotony of it all! How I hated that window—the view from it is always the same. Not even a bill changes—it is

THE JOURNALIST.

He was sitting in the far corner of the Journalism library yesterday morning. His cheeks were sunken. His hair was snowy white. A heavy cane at his side indicated that he could no longer get about as once had been his wont. He was reading through a bound volume of the New York Times for 1884.

We asked him if we could do anything for him.
"Do anything for me, boy?" he repeated after us. "Yes! Listen to me talk!" His voice was still hearty; we'll swear a light of youth shone in his eyes.

He talked. He had been a star-reporter on the Times years ago. Today his greatest pleasure consists in reading the stories that he pounded out in his years of service. He lives in the past.
We cut a class to listen to him; it would have been criminal to disturb that flow of reminiscences. Unconsciously, he brought out all the romance in the life of a journalist.
Some day we're going to give you some of the stories he told us.—B.A.C.

R. V. C. NOTES.

There will be a meeting of the Delta Sigma Society this afternoon at 3 o'clock, which will take the form of an "Impromptu Speaking Contest." Miss Cameron, Miss Brown and Miss Idler have very kindly consented to act as judges for this occasion.
Students desiring to enter the contest who have not already signed up, are asked to do so as soon as possible.

A meeting of the Menorah Society was held on Tuesday at 4.15 p.m. Miss Bertha Meyer read a paper on "The Economic Condition of Jews in the War Area," in which she described the sad plight of many thousands of Jews, who are on the verge of starvation. German Kultur has played its part also in the misery of the Jews of Poland. Various suggestions as to the economic reconstruction of Jewish Communities after the war were pointed out by Miss Bessie Stamm, from an article in the American Jewish Chronicle.

MEDICAL OFFICER NOW ON LEAVE SPOKE AT R. V. C.

You women are grumbling because you cannot bear the burden of war as the women of France and Belgium are bearing theirs. It may help you, if I say that I have seen the women of France and Belgium, and count it a privilege to have been received by a French woman of any class as even her equal. These women are frank too. One said, "We appreciate greatly the help of British as Allies, yet we detest the English because we cannot wipe out the memory of Cressy." We followed the same route through France as did Henry V. on his victorious march. Those battlefields are well known to us, and to the French. If ever I run a war, I hope it will be against the French, for they are such lovely enemies.

In the French family the woman seems to be the head; and because she has always been accustomed to do the greater part of the work, she has thus fallen so easily into her work at the beginning of the war.

We went overseas in the winter of 1915, reaching England in April, where we were greeted as people that had come to fight for themselves. We reached Kent, with its beautiful English lanes late in April; then later to Havre, where we first heard the sound of guns—"guns far away to the north—with their beautiful mellow sounds, like bells in the distance."

The process of settling down is a simple one; men find places in the barns to sleep. If straw is used, each man pays 2c. per night, but 1c. without the straw. At one place the landlady had lost a leg, and having no artificial one, carried always a chair with her. The officers showed their great sympathy for the sufferings of the French women, everywhere.

Major Macphail told much about the quiet life of the French people, where he had been billeted, and showed how these people always did all in their power to make the soldiers comfortable and welcome. At one time Major Macphail's company stayed at a convent, which held also 200 refugees. "Coming back there, later, was like coming home," he said. "Those sisters were women of wit and humor; the men built homes for themselves out of tarpaper and sticks. There, living in a religious community, nearly all of the men attended the Catholic church. The whole world seems Catholic to the soldiers in France. This is bound to have a great effect on the country when these men return. The churches are the only beauty spots in Flanders. And their beauty is something that we have never been accustomed to, even here."

Major Macphail told of the delightful visit that his Corps made in one place that had been untouched by the war. "We would all like to return there some time."

At one place, French band played the whole of the "Peer Gynt Suite." Asking an old peasant who stood by what he thought of the music of the pipes, which the British soldiers gave in return, he replied politely, "I do not understand the music—I am sure there must be something the matter with my ears."

Nowhere did Major Macphail and his friends get out of the region of warm-hearted Frenchwomen, who were always ready to provide hot coffee, dry clothing, etc., for tired, wet soldiers. We did not get on so well with the Belgians, said Major Macphail, but we must remember that those whom we met were only a few—those who were forced by the desolation of their country to drive as close a bargain as possible with the soldiers. But we grew to know all the people in the small district in which we were stationed—all their troubles and happenings.

It was difficult for all the people to pronounce our names, especially mine. I was known usually as "the Captain with the little dog." The Belgians and French lack medical service, because all their doctors are at the front. So we had to help these people out; and there was much rivalry among us to see which could have the greatest practice; the number of our patients there often exceeded that even of Montreal.

Major Macphail then spoke of his return to Canada. "When I came back, I thought that I should see the enthusiasm that I saw on my departure. But I see instead a race antagonism, enmity of religion. And the occasional drafts of men I see in the streets are depressed, spiritless." I spoke at first of this unconquerable Canadian Army, and now I remind you

THE ROYAL MILITARY COLLEGE OF CANADA.

There are few national institutions of more value and interest to the country than the Royal Military College of Canada. Notwithstanding this, its object and the work it is doing for the general public, is not sufficiently understood by the general public.

The College is a Government Institution, designed primarily for the purpose of giving instruction in all branches of military science to cadets and officers of the Canadian Militia. In fact, it corresponds to Woolwich and Sandhurst.

The Commandant and military instructors are all officers on the active list of the Imperial army, lent for the purpose, and there is in addition a complete staff of professors for the civil subjects which form such an important part of the College course. Medical attendance is also provided.

Whilst the College is organized on a strictly military basis, the cadets receive a practical and scientific training in subjects essential to a sound modern education.

The course includes a thorough grounding in Mathematics, Civil Engineering, Surveying, Physics, Chemistry, French, English, etc.

The strict discipline maintained at the College is one of the most valuable features of the course, and in addition, the constant practice of gymnastics, drills and outdoor exercises of all kinds, ensures health and excellent physical condition.

Commissions in all branches of the Imperial service and Canadian Permanent Force are offered annually.

The diploma of graduation is considered by the authorities conducting the examination for Dominion Land Surveyor to be equivalent to a university degree, and by the Regulations of the Law Society of Ontario, it obtains the same exemption as a B.A. degree.

The length of the course is three years in three terms of 9½ months each.

The total cost of the course, including board, uniform, instructional material and all other expenses, is $800.

The annual competitive examination for admission to the College, takes place in May of each year, at the headquarters of the several military districts.

For full particulars regarding this examination and for any other information, application should be made to the Secretary of the Militia Council, Ottawa, Ont., or to the Commandant, Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont.

PROVINCE OF QUEBEC

DEPARTMENT OF COLONIZATION, MINES AND FISHERIES.

The chief minerals of the Province of Quebec are Asbestos, Chromite, Copper, Iron, Gold, Molybdenite, Phosphate, Mica, Graphite, Ornamental and Building Stone, Clays, Etc.

The Mining Law gives absolute security of Title and is very favourable to the Prospector.

MINERS' CERTIFICATES.

First of all, obtain a miner's certificate, from the Department in Quebec, or from the nearest agent. The price of this certificate is $10.00, and it is valid until the first of January following. This certificate gives the right to prospect on public lands and on private lands, on which the mineral rights belong to the Crown.

The holder of this certificate may stake mining claims to the extent of 200 acres.

WORKING CONDITIONS.

During the first six months following the staking of the claim, work on it must be performed to the extent of at least twenty-five days of eight hours.

SIX MONTHS AFTER STAKING.

At the expiration of six months from the date of the staking, the prospector, to retain his rights, must take out a mining license.

MINING LICENSE.

The mining license may cover 40 to 200 acres in unsurveyed territory. The price of this license is Fifty Cents an acre per year, and a fee of $10.00 on issue. It is valid for one year, and is renewable on the same terms, on producing an affidavit that during the year work has been performed to the extent of at least twenty-five days' labor on each forty acres.

MINING CONCESSION.

Notwithstanding the above, a mining concession may be acquired at any time, at the rate of $5.00 an acre for SUPERIOR METALS, and $3.00 an acre for INFERIOR MINERALS.

The attention of prospectors is specially called to the territory in the North-Western part of the Province of Quebec, north of the height of land where important mineralized belts are known to exist.

PROVINCIAL LABORATORY.

Special arrangements have been made with the POLYTECHNIC SCHOOL of LAVAL UNIVERSITY, 228 ST. DENIS STREET, MONTREAL, for the analysis of minerals at very reduced rates for the benefit of miners and prospectors in the Province of Quebec. The well equipped laboratories of this institution and its trained chemists ensure results of undoubted integrity and reliability.

The Bureau of Mines at Quebec will give all the information desired in connection with the mines and mineral resources of the Province, on application addressed to

HONORE MERCIER,
Minister of Colonization, Mines and Fisheries, Quebec

SOLICITING IN BARBER SHOPS.

It is a very common habit for barbers in most Barber's Shops to solicit their clients for Shampoo, Singing, Massage or Tonics. They are without doubt "necessities" in order to keep the face and scalp in good condition. But Potvin's Trade is composed of an intelligent body of clients who care not to be solicited. So are my instructions to my barbers not to solicit your customers for everything on the Calendar.

NEWS RECEIVED FROM SCIENCE MAN WITH BATTERY.

some big Staff Officers. Then about a week after that we were formed into the 13th Siege Battery. Some of the fellows were too young, and some too small, so these were picked over and sent to another camp. The four sections were formed separately, so I'm in the 4th, or D-section, while Anderson and Bustin are in A. The sergeants and some of the corporals are men from the old McGill Battery, and from Cape's, while the bombardiers and a few of the corporals are our men. Then the whole of the 2nd Brigade, C.R.A., was moved from Shorncliffe, and we moved, too, on Sunday, Sept. 2. The night before we left I with six others, made 1,170 sandwiches—rooms full, for they were army ones. We left Shorncliffe early Sunday morning and took the train to Millford Station, then marched about 1½ miles with kit-bags and everything else, to Millford Camp, Willey. Before we left that a.m., about 20 fellows were picked out, and afterwards sent to Bexhill, near Hastings. We never knew why, but they rejoined us again a few days before we left Willey. The day after we reached Willey our five old officers, rejoined us. They had been taken from us when we reached Shorncliffe, and had been taking a course in staff work at Lidd, where, by the way, they took the first five places. Then came two more Canadians and two Americans. At Willey one bunch were on a signalling class, and another on a gunnery. About 15 or 20 were left over, and were on permanent furloughs, which were very easy, only about one or two hours' work in the morning. I belonged to this noble party, and it was quite remarkable how a lad to be gradually letting out my belt. When I joined I weighed 140, and now I weigh 171. Of course I did not get it all at Willey. The third week we were at Willey the battery, with the exception of about 10 men, took musketry, and on the Friday following went to the ranges at Aldershot. The distance is about 12 to 14 miles. We left at about 1.30 p.m., with rifle, great-coat, water-bottle, mess tin, ground sheet, haversack and gas helmet. We arrived at North Camp, Aldershot, at about 6 p.m., and slept there in huts that night. Next a.m. we went to the ranges, and fired five shots, grouping at 100 yards, 5 application, and 5 rapid in 30 secs. at 200 yards, then 5 with the gas helmet on (a rotten, nasty, sloppily job), at 200, and 5 application at 300. We broke the previous record average of 63 by points. I thought I'd only made 70, but the official report gave me 83 out of a possible 105. We were through about noon, and after lunch three of us hired a Mychette, just outside the camp. Afterwards we rowed up the canal a little way, and were back in time to catch the 4.30 train into Aldershot town—(about 7 minutes' ride). There we walked about a bit, had supper, went to a movie, and then to the 8 p.m. show at the Hippodrome. We had to leave a few minutes early, though, to get the 9.43 back, which put us in on the stroke of 10 p.m. On Sunday morning we started back at 8.40 a.m., and reached Willey at 12.30 p.m.

The scenery around Willey was very beautiful, and I had a few nice walks to nearby towns and villages. We were, while there, however, still attached to the 2nd Brigade, C.R.A., for rationing, discipline, etc., but now we are free from that. We are now in an Imperial camp, and the hours are much better. Revellie is at 5 instead of 5.15, then no roll-call at 5.15, and no P.T. before breakfast, which is at 7.30. Fall in and drill is from 8.15 to 12.30, and 1.45 p.m. to 4 p.m. Then we are free to go out till 10 p.m., instead of till 9. We also have iron beds, and a kind of mattress instead of just 3 planks across two little stands. The huts also are better, and there is a movie, and a theatre in camp. On Saturdays and Sundays we are off at 12.30 p.m., and last Saturday four of us went for a walk, and coming across the Aldershot bus, we rode into Farnborough, spent the afternoon there, and took a taxi back. Sunday we went for a boat on the canal, but could not get one.

North Minden Barracks, Deepcut, Near Farnborough, Hants.
Nov. 3, 1917.

Dear —, We are fairly well settled here now, and find it the best camp so far. We are the only Canadians around, and most of the Imperials are young fellows. We have our own mess room, etc. As soon as we arrived here they started us in on gun drill, platform and gin erection, and the methods of moving guns. We finished up our gun drill yesterday to a certain extent, and we expect to do night gun work and pit digging for a bit now. I'm number 9 on my gun team, which means that I carry shells up to the gun from the shell pit. It's pretty stale and strenuous work at times, but I'm used to it now.

I've got to know the fellows in my section better now. There is a fine bunch, and our sergeant is the best in the battery. I'm quite content to be a "near rank gunner," as the saying is, and have none of the old-time aspirations to stripes, etc. A gunner's life is the best.

There is a Garrison Theatre across in the Infantry lines, and they put on some very good plays there, a few of which are "Under Cover," "The Rosary," "The Merry Widow," etc. I go up to see them fairly regularly. This is not a very great extravagance, as the front rows are only 2s. 6d., and the next are 1s. There are also a couple of movie shows. A few towns and villages cluster around within a five mile radius, but after seeing them once, there is nothing else to attract you again. There's Grimley, Cambridge, Aldershot, Farnborough, and Woking all within reach by bus or taxi or train, or an hour's walk.

If ever you have any old "Daily" papers that you don't particularly want to keep or send home, you might send them over now and then, as I should very much like to know what is going on at college. This, however, will not exempt you from writing.

Yours as ever,
CONRAD E. WATSON.

GLEE CLUB HOLD THIRD REHEARSAL

Solo Performers are Invited to Identify Themselves With Club.

Last night, the Glee Club held its third successful rehearsal in the Union. About 30 men and one piano were present.

The executive held a short meeting just prior to the rehearsal, and decided to invite solo performers in the college to identify themselves with the Glee Club. This means that the Glee Club will welcome the affiliation of any men in college who can sing vocal solos, perform on musical instruments, or enunciate amusing monologues. Their talent will be more available for student entertainments. If they are associated with the Glee Club, because the Glee Club is now approached whenever a smoker is given.

Mr. G. N. Belyea, owing to pressure of studies, tendered his resignation as representative from Medicine Mr. C. T. Fink was elected to this position.

Meanwhile three or four new voices were being placed, with the aid of the piano, which has been rented by the Glee Club.

The four parts were then placed in four groups around the piano.

As Mr. Cousins, the Honorary Conductor, was unable to be present, and Mr. Campbell, the Conductor, is suffering from a severe cold, the position was temporarily filled by Mr. Scott.

Four simple chords were tried with and without accompaniment. When these had been thoroughly learned, the transitions from one chord to another were tried.

Mr. Scott then pointed out that the harmonies just practised were sufficient to form a choral base for the well-known College hymn, "Hail, Alma Mater." The first verse of this was next sung in four part harmony with the melody, and the result was so startling that the Conductor called out one man from each part to verify the pleasure which he so obviously manifested. Their verdict was unanimously to the effect that never before in their memories had such exquisite harmonies reverberated through the volumetric dimensions of the Union Hall.

As the time was expiring, the members tried the old familiar, "Come Fill Your Glasses Up," to the same harmonies, and showed marked ability to apply the harmonies to a new melody, putting the chords in their proper places.

The rehearsal was then adjourned, but several of the vocal stars remained behind to sing selections from a college song-book which one man happened to bring. This continued until the closing of the Union compelled them to desert.

Next Tuesday night the Medical Freshman-Sophomore Dinner will take place. The Mandolin Club has been engaged to perform at this function. As a goodly number of Glee Club members will attend either as "dinners" or as "dinners" (if such a term may be applied to the production of one form of din—to some people, the next rehearsal will be held on Wednesday night, December 5th.

During the week, sufficient music will be ordered to keep the members busy at the next meeting, and it is hoped that our Honorary Conductor will be able to resume his duties.

THE PROPER SPIRIT.

"I am heartily in favor of more intensive training for University students," says Albert Ross Hill, president of the Missouri University in the student paper, The Evening Missourian. President Ross also declares himself as being strongly in sympathy with the movement for universal training after the war.

As a result of the promotion of the president of the University, Missouri has compulsory drill for men three times every week. The drills are compulsory for all men.

There is such enthusiasm over training among the students that often the individual companies and battalions hold extra voluntary drills. "Previous to the declaration of war," says H. B. Rasmussen, editor of the Evening Missourian, "there was an aversion to military drills of all kinds. But that feeling exists no longer."

HARVARD R. O. T. C. TO BE REVIEWED NEXT MONDAY.

The Harvard R. O. T. C. will have its first regimental review next Monday afternoon on Soldiers' Field. The corps will be reviewed by the Harvard Committee on Military Science and Tactics, among the members of which are Franklin D. Roosevelt, '94, and Major General Leonard Wood, '91.

THE BROWNING TO MR. CRANCH.

Mr. Browning to Mr. Cranch: "You wrote me the kindest of letters long ago, which gave me all the feelings you intended it should, do believe; but I delayed answering it as my foolish way is, till I set off for England. Then came other engagements and calls on time and thought, and I should dare to write but that Story undertakes that you shall forgive and be your very self of old. We went to London two years ago, then to Paris, thence returned to London, and now here we are since last autumn, that is in Tuscany, and we shape our course for Rome this winter, and England again in the spring. On the whole we are in a somewhat livelier way than when you saw us. . . . and our child (do you just remember the little beginning of a creature?) is quite strong and well, a good gracious little fellow who makes the home ring with his laughter from morn till night. Story informs me of you and yours, but you must go over all that ground again, and tell us how painting advances, and poetry, and as much about yourself as your beneficence chooses. I know I have never once made a fresh American acquaintance that I did not question, the first thing, about you and George Curtis. Willard, and Norton, There are no better hearts on earth," as your and our Emerson says.

"You may think what a joy it was to us to have the Story come over to us on the day of our arrival here. They are on the hill-top—we house in the cliffs of the rock. We came to ignorance that they were in Tuscany. Now we see them daily or nearly so, and our weeks go only too fleetly by, with them to speed them in this delightful place—for such it is, spite of a clot of Dukes and Kings—kingsmen who are sojourning here also. The beauty is more than they can spoil. . . . I shall let my wife finish this scrap."

Mrs. Browning wrote to Mrs. Cranch:

"If you ever forgive us, which is possible, though improbable on the whole within the bounds of human nature, do tell us of the children. The sight of Mrs. Story's reminds me that I must not any longer think of them as babies, indeed even my own boy might suggest as much. Do you remember the small creature with fluent arms and legs? . . . Try to believe that we have never forgotten any of you, nor are likely to forget you ever. The truth is, my husband is deep in the corruption of neglectful or procrastinating letter writing and although I have cried in his ears as loud as conscience itself, he put off from one week to another, and from one month to another, writing the letter due to you, till he covered his sin in the ashes of shame, and made up his mind never to dare to do it. . . . You see we were back again in Italy after a year and a half in Paris and London. Will you come back? Do you ever think of it, dream of it, long for it? Or are you caught up in the great whirlpool of American life, and stunted dead to the music of Italy? For my part, absent or present, the tune of it sings on in my head. I liked Paris very much, but the love of my Florence would not go out. From 'The Life and Letters of Christopher Pearse Cranch.'—Christian Science Monitor.

CORPSE VANISHES—MEDIC STUDENT BADLY FRIGHTENED.

Poe's gruesome stories of horror and woe are nothing in their weirdness when compared to the wild tale of the Anatomy building. It was but a few days ago that a young medical student—his name must be kept out—who after working several hours over his corpse, placed it in a dark corner and went out to smoke a cigarette. When he returned to resume his work, the corpse had vanished. He looked under the table, beneath the instrument case and searched through the closet, but nobody was to be found. The windows had been securely locked but the young man suddenly realized that the door had been left part way open. The "stiff" had come to life and had gone. Desperately he went from room to room, but all traces of the fugitive were lost. It had left the building.

This student went home that night in a frightful state of consternation. He dared not tell anyone of the mysterious disappearance. That night he rolled and tossed; unnatural dreams of walking corpses beset his brains. Early the next morning the telephone bell rang. The voice of a dignified professor was heard over the wire, saying, "I wanted to tell you that I borrowed your stiff last yesterday. I thank you."—Minnesota Daily.

STUDY OF LATIN UPHOLD.

"Latin is not dead" is the verdict of a recent conference of men from all representative professions held at Princeton University. "Latin and Greek aid more in clearness of thinking than perhaps any other subject," said Herbert Hoover, the food administrator. Statesmen like ex-presidents Taft and Roosevelt, Speaker Clark and Alfred Noyes all endorse the study of Latin and Greek as mental exercise, if for no other reason. They base their opinions on the fact that statistics show students of these languages succeed in meeting intellectual tests better than those who have not studied them.

EDUCATIONAL CO-OPERATION.

More than 100 delegates at the 23rd annual convention of the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the Southern States, held in Atlanta, adopted articles creating a commission on institutions of higher education, this commission to consist of 89 persons, 24 from the higher institutions, and 15 from the secondary schools. The term of office of members of the commission is three years. The work includes the preparation of uniform transfer blanks from one college to another; a statement of the standards to be met by institutions of higher education, which are members or prospective members of the association; with authority to recommend to the executive committee for dismissal higher institutions that fail to measure up to the standards of the association and to prepare lists of institutions which conform to the standards prescribed.

CHEMISTRY TOLD TO LOOK INTO FUTURE

Mr. B. C. Hesse, A New York Chemist, Addresses Chemists in Cambridge.

Before the Chemical Society of Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Cambridge, Mr. B. C. Hesse, a New York chemist of note, addressed some 125 members on "Doing Our Bit." He spoke of the prominent part chemistry has played, and will in the future continue to play in bringing an end to this terrible war.

At present, when the war guns are being kept busy, little attention is being paid to after-the-war affairs. In the period after the war, and in the rush of rebuilding and making up for lost opportunities in the multitudinous directions offered, the chemist may be lost sight of unless he now plans systematically ahead, as well as prepares himself for future tasks.

Generally speaking, the chemists' future work can be classified as pertaining to matters of national defence, development of natural resources. Mr. Hesse called the chemists' attention to the importance of holding the public confidence, as well as the confidence of capital, and the value of co-operation with the government. He advised them not to indulge in any wild schemes, and to do what they promise, and not to promise too much, such as they could never live up to.

AN EXAMPLE OF EFFICIENCY.

"There is but one subject to which the minds of all are turned at the present time." In this manner Professor Harold Jacoby announced the subject of his very interesting talk in the Chapel of Columbia University a week ago. Professor Jacoby took as a general theme the results which personal efficiency, and also old-fashioned grit and perseverance can attain in preparation for war.

The professor's idea of efficiency, is not seeking something to do, and doing that in a highly efficient manner, but consists in taking what is before you, and accomplishing it as well as possible.

Professor Jacoby then gave a specific instance of the success of the theory. He told of a boy in the Naval Reserves who was put to work with a pick and shovel. Although this work was not what the boy had expected in the navy, yet he started in without a complaint, and with the determination to become a good shoveler. He succeeded in this and in other things, and at the present time, this young fellow is the commander of one of the new submarine-chasers.

Professor Jacoby called this example a good instance of what efficiency and determination can do. He concluded his remarks by admitting, with a proud smile, that the boy was his own son.

"ENGLISH AS SHE IS SPOKE."

On such rare occasions as the good souls who live in Porto Rico feel an irresistible impulse to dash off a letter in the more or less well known English language, they hang the "closed for repairs" sign to the front door of their business emporiums for a week, and go to it. A North and South of the result usually would make any self-respecting English prof. gasp hoarsely and imitate the dying swan.

M. R. M. has been instrumental in preserving the following two choice specimens for posterity; they were originally received by the passenger agent of a Porto Rican steamship corporation.

Exhibit A.

"Dear Sir:
"I take pleasure in announcing you that my father died yesterday and I cannot sail to-morrow. My regard to you and your family.

"Yours truly,"

Exhibit B.

"Dear Sirs:
"Just received your in which you ask for some information about the travelling case. Just before I left Porto Rico, my father give it to me, and as I get sea-sick, I do not attend very much to it, but what I did see, I will tell you.

"It is a brand new one. It is cover with a kind of leather of dark cooler. When you open it, every side falls toward its direction.

"If the case is more of a lady than a boy.

"I have a big lady comb and a long case for me tooth brush. I have another one not so long, and both are open in the middle. It have a fill for the finger nails, and a little brush for the finger nails. It have almost everything to clean the finger nails.

"That's all I recall, and if you find it I will be very obly to you.

"Waiting for your answer,

One day a week has been set aside at the University Commons as a meatless day. To aid in conserving the meat supply of the nation, the managers have decided to omit the usual meat dish on that day and replace it with vegetables, grain products or fish.

COMPETITION FOR DRAWINGS AND SKETCHES FOR ANNUAL.

The Annual Board, in its meeting last night, decided to enlist the talent of all years and of all faculties, in making it a howling success. There exists in the several faculties men who can do excellent work in this direction. This has been the experience of past years, and it is felt that it can be counted upon this year.

That the Annual is an institution at McGill which is one with which any undergraduate may well feel proud in connecting himself is by this time well understood. What is wanted are page titles for faculties, art suggestions for the cover, and border designs. The theme of the headings will be suggested by the faculty functions. To get started at such a sketch all that is necessary is to decide upon some idea consistent with a certain faculty. It should be evident and clear in its significance and general bearing to that faculty. This idea must then be embodied in the sketch.

The words "R.V.C." "Medicine," "Science," "Arts" and "Law" at once suggest an amazing number of possible ideas that would be suitable for themes of sketches. For further information about this, the following representatives may be consulted:

Arts—A. I. Smith.
Law—R. Bridgman.
Science—D. G. Proudfoot.
Medicine—R. C. Leggo.
R. V. C.—Miss Craig.
To successful competitors in this undertaking complimentary copies of the Annual will be given.

MEREDITH THE OBSCURE.

The voice of Meredith, the "obscure," the "Prose Browning," speaks out clearly enough now. For instance, from "One of Our Conquerors," "If we won't learn that we have become Continentals we shall be marched over"; or, "Well, then, conscript them and they'll be all of a better pattern. The only thing to do and the cheapest," or again, "Instead of asking him, (the Kelt) to forgive, which he cannot do, you must teach him to admire" which I interpret: Instead of dosing the Irishman with political compromises, help him to understand the splendour and the greatness of the British Empire.

SPECIAL EXAMS. AT HARVARD.

The Harvard Faculty of Arts and Sciences has decided that special mid-year examinations shall be held next month for the benefit of men who are leaving soon after that time for military and naval service. This will make it possible for many Seniors who would be unable to wait for the regular mid-year examinations to obtain their degrees.

This ruling will affect the R. O. T. C. applicants for the third series of officers' training camps, especially because they must report for duty on January 5, 1918, several weeks before the date of the official mid-year examinations. The special examinations will begin late in December and extend through the first few days of January.

Y. M. C. A. WAR FUND TOTAL IS $50,606,000.

NEW YORK, N.Y.—Total subscriptions to the Y. M. C. A. war work fund from the entire country were $50,606,000, more than $15,000,000 above the amount originally asked.

New England's total, practically aggregating $6,501,000, is an oversubscription of 85 per cent. of the quota of $3,500,000, and the highest of any section of the country, with the exception of the Southwestern department, which had an oversubscription of 102 per cent.

HE ALWAYS HAD.

The "sporting" son of wealthy parents was offered a job by an old friend of his father.

"How much will you pay me?" he asked.

"All you are worth," said the friend.

To which he replied with business-like brevity: "No, thank you. I can do better than that."

Michigan's powerful machine, with Quarterback Weston as chief ground gainer, rolled up a 42-0 score on Cornell. Weston played a game that will live long in history. In the first quarter he raced eighty yards for a touchdown, and every touchdown made by Michigan was the result of his play.

If the student wants to help his government save paper and dye, he should use the three-cent stamps. It is just as convenient for those in the post office to stamp three one-cent stamps as one three-cent one, but in the saving to the government, the use of the three-cent denomination is preferable.

A YEAR AGO TO-DAY.

A meeting of the undergraduates interested in hockey will be held at the Harvard Athletic Association, with Fred W. Moore, graduate manager, presiding.

Harvard has some fine material for an upper class seven, and it is for the purpose of going over the field carefully and deciding whether the proposition to confine the game to regimental competition is warranted that the confab is being held.

MENTAL LAPSES.

"What was the racket in the show-er last night?"
"Oh, Jones was using one of his crash towels."
